If this game were any more than $1.50 I would have said you should take a hard pass. Small environment, few enemy types and absolutely no settings/config at all.

But at such a low price, with actual decent graphics, textures, sound design and quite an interesting gun game play mechanic, I have to say I recommend it. Even the starting lobby has some very nice touches. You might not play it long, but if you want to expand your VR library then you could (and I have) do a lot worse with a buck-fiddy than this. If they released this with a proper campaign, actual movement and customizable settings (ala Dead Effect 2) then I'd definitely consider buying it for real money.
